Our Oshawa is Culturally Charged

OSHAWA – The City of Oshawa is pleased to announce that culture is the focus of the second edition in the Our Oshawa video series. The video features The Robert McLaughlin Gallery (RMG), CEO Donna Raetsen-Kemp who talks about the City's cultural energy and diversity. Check out the new YouTube video now.

The RMG is the largest art gallery in Durham Region, located at 72 Queen St. It features five galleries that enable people of all ages to experience art in ways that are meaningful to them.

“Culture has ignited throughout the City,” says Councillor Amy McQuaid-England, Chair of the Corporate Services Committee. The City of Oshawa has many enriching opportunities to get the community involved, and it is great to see a positive impact as a result. I hope people continue to share their Our Oshawa stories.

The Our Oshawa campaign includes a series of videos that will be filmed and released throughout the year highlighting accomplishments, positive stories and achievements within our community.

Residents are encouraged to share their stories online on Connect Oshawa (www.connectoshawa.ca). It is these stories that will inspire future videos and promotional materials that will be available throughout the city and posted on the City's Twitter, Facebook and new Instagram accounts.

The City's new Instagram account (@CityOfOshawa) continues to grow with more than 250 followers since the account's launch last month in April. The account is frequently updated with all the great things happening within the Oshawa community.
